A British View of the American Tariff.

A British view of the American Parill.

Schedied Duly Telegraph.

"The promoters of the McKinley tariff meant it to push forward the policy of America for the Americans. One method of realizing it was to keep all work within their own dominions. The country was to be made self-supplying: what could be produced at home was not to be bought abroad. That was the key-note of the Mcabroad. That was the key-note of the Mc-Kinley scheme, and it is working out the idea of its designers with the precision and effectiveness of a machine."

REPUBLICAN victory in the coming progress of the sound commercial doc-trines that underlis the commercial greatis of Great Britain and alone maintain British ascendancy.—London Evening News.

IN 1890 it was a conflict of predictions; now our adversaries must face trade stat-istics and prices current.—President Harrison, June 21, 189.

The Practical Side of It.

There are a few free traders in West Virginia, that is to say, men who prefer the British tariff system to any other and would like to see it introduced in this country. If no others would vote the Democratic ticket this year, West Virginia would go Republican by about one hundred and fifty thousand ma-

Yet the Democratic platform, adopted by the last Democratic national convention, declares specifically for this very tariff system and denounces as unconstitutional any tariff to protect in any degree or to establish any American industry. And the mass of Democrats in West Virginia are shouting for the party which makes this remarkable declaration.

Why do men endorse parties and polities in which they do not believe? Primarily in this case it must be because they do not believe the Democratic party.

Believing their presidential nominee to be better than their party, they have some sort of an idea that in some sort of way their party intends to be better than its platform. They have not stopped to reason it out, but they listen to their orators and they read their newspapers and they consult their prejudices, and they remember that they always have been Democrats and determine that in some way their party is to rise above itself and be very much This brings us back to the proposition of Mr. Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who has been honest enough to say that there is no place in less destructive than it says it will be the Democratic party for a protectionist. The Intelligences admits as freely that there is no place in the Republican party for a free trader.

A man who wants free trade is insane to seek it from a Republican organization. A man who wants protection is equally unwise and untrue to his convictions to seek it by polling a Democratic ballot.

If this is not conclusive logic we shall be glad to have somebody pick a flaw in it.

Every Man's Pocket.

One of the vital questions involved in this campaign to which not enough attention has been paid, is the question of the nation's money. Democrats have been airaid to discuss it because it is a manifest element of very great weakness in their cause. Republicans have not been giving it the attention it deserves because the Democratic party, in declaring any and all protection to be a violation of the constitutions of the United States, has offered a topic which may well fill every issue of a Republican newspaper and consume all the time of every Republican speaker.

The people of this generation have known nothing but good money. They have absolutely no acquaintance with bad money. Now and then they have seen a counterfeit bill, but Uncle Sam is so keen on the track of every counterfeiter, and punishment under the laws of the United States is so severe and sure, that comparatively few men are bold enough to embark in the hazardous enterprise of counterfeiting the national money. Old men have had an experience with the bank notes of former days, but even some of these seem to have forgotten how bad that bad money was.

The country is asked to-day to abandon the good money, good everywhere, for the old money which was good scarcely anywhere, and which invited the least skilfull to counterfeit it.

We of this generation do not have to be expert in detecting counterfeit bank notes nor in computing rates of discount as between the notes of one state and another. Every dollar that is not counterfeit is a good dollar. The bank which issued it may be a losing concern, may be tottering on the verge of ruin, may have passed out of existence, but its dollar is good, for back of it stands the United States with ample security for every dollar issued and with its own faith pledged to redeem every dollar at one hundred cents.

This, of course, is an immense advantage to everybody in the country, to the manufacturer, to the trader, and above all to the men and women who work for wages. There is a point in this connection which cannot be too often or too strongly dwelt upon. The wage-earners of the country may be absolutely sure that when pay day comes they will be paid in the poorest, because the cheapest, dollar that can be found, and they will have no recourse.

The Democratic party proposes to substitute this kind of money for the money with which the country to-day is familiar. The Republican party proposes to hold fast to that which we know to be good. It does not promise the country that it will experiment anew on a wild and reckless currency already discredited by some of the saddest pages in our history.

What do the people of West Virginia want, the good or the bad? If they want the good would it not be folly in the highest degree to vote for the bad? It needs no argument to prove that if they vote with the Democratic party they are asking that party to give them the bad money—how bad history suggests and bitter experience would fully demonstrate.

Of Course Not.

Of course the Democratic politicians oppose the "foace" bill. Do they want honest elections in the south? They don't want them in West Virginia, where, according to Democratic authority, it required an act of the legislature to seat their defeated nominee for goverdor. A national law providing for honest elections would not have prevented this, since it was a state matter. but it is the principle of honesty they object to.

THE people of Ohio county have need to look well to the matter of the local offices. It is of great importance to them to place in those offices men who will be faithful. The record of every candidate should be searched to see whether he is the best man offered for the place. If that investigation be not satisfactory it will be safe to look farther and try to do better.

Everysopy remembers the tally sheet forgeries in Columbus in the interest of the Democratic party. For this artistic work "Doc" Campbell went to the penitentiary. Now he goes back for stealing a horse. It should be said in justice to Mr. Campbell that it is quite probable that he would have preferred to help his party again this year by the exercise of his peculiar talent.

ELI PERKINS gives his reasons for deserting Harrison and the party of protection and going over to Cleveland and the party of free trade. It must be said that if Mr. Eli feels this way about it, he should do just what he is going to do. His reasons will be found in another column.

Wheeling must wake up and get on her Columbian garb. Christopher Columbus was a real being; and the continent he discovered is a fixed fact. We have this country to be thankful for and we should be glad to say so in all the bunting we can crowd on.

How the Democrats do hope that Mr. Blaine may not open his eloquent mouth again in this campaign. He may speech, and devotes three columns to trying to answer it. This being the case, how much space would have been required for the reply if the Register had printed an adequate report of the speech.

GOVERNOR McKINLEY hit the Democratic party so hard on the tariff question and the issue of sound money, that the Register was afraid to let its readers know what he said. This is quite entertaining.

THE record of trans-Atlantic westward voyages has been broken again. Before long it will be necessary to go around the world in a sailing vessel if one desires to get the benefit of the ocean THE school children should be the

THOSE DRAWBACKS.

Acting Secretary spaulding Writes Con-cerning Their Benefits.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 19 .- Acting Secretary of the Treasury Spaulding has written a letter to the editor of a mining journal in Michigan in response to recent criticisms on the drawback privileges of the tariff act. The specific charge is that the allowance of drawcharge is that the allowance of draw-back on imported material is injurious instead of beneficial to American inter-ests, and the case of iron ore is cited as a proof. Mr. Spaulding says: "While the tariff law provides for the establish-ment of bonded smelting warehouses, it is evident from the fact that no iron ore is treated in such warehouses, that ore is treated in such warehouses, that no inducements are offered by the privilege which lead to the use of foreign instead of domestic iron ore.

"The smelting establishments, now operated under bond, are principally devoted to imported lead and silver ore, but no iron ore is utilized by them. This seems to meet the complaint which is made against the alleged discrimination in favor of foreign iron ore. crimination in favor of foreign fron ore. The drawback law operates for the ben-efit of those manufacturers who make articles for exportation. Certain foreign materials may in some cases be ad-vantageously met. If the manufac-turerwere forced to pay duty upon such materials he could not compete with his rivals in those countries wherein such materials are produced. To equalize his advantages with the foreign manufacturer the law provides that upon all imported material used by him in the construction of articles for export he shall be entitled to a refund of the duty paid less one per cent. This enables him to develop a special branch of in-dustry which he could not otherwise maintain, and which gives employment to workmen and laborers in this country and which incidentally demands many materials produced at home." He closed his letter with a long list of articles of iron and steel now exported with benefit of drawback, and says the list is receiving constant accessions Forger Arrested.

New York, Oct. 18.—Samuel Mitchell has been arrested on a charge of forgery. It is claimed he has swindled a number of firms and banks, among others the firm of Peter Henderson & Co., seed dealers. In this instance he represented himself as a member of the firm of Dickinson & Co., Chicago, and Henderson & Co. cashed a check his endorsement, believing him to be what he represented.

That "Force Bill" Issue,

The following is the plank in the Republican platform which the Demo-cratic party denounces as "revolution-ary and an outrage on the people of the South." Will any honest, patriotic cit-izen say that it is unpatriotic and un-American? The "force bill" issue is a side issue raised to create sectional prejudice and to hold the solid south in line, and here is the Republican declaline, and here is the Republican decla ration it is based on:
